ONE W.
FREEMAN.

Nor him who, to his sire and country true,
Fell 'mid the ranks of the invading foe,

accustomed as ever escaped the gallows.
"But, if you're doing it, my good fellow," he exclaimed, giving me a shake, "I'm taking a stroll by moonlight," I replied, endeavoring to retain my composure.
"Well, perhaps you will just take a stroll inside, will you?" returned the ruffian, pushing open the door, and dragging me in after him.
All the inmates of the barn immediately stopped work and rushed toward us when they saw me.
"Why, what's all this?" they exclaimed.
"A loaf! I found peepin' outside," said my friend.
"He's a traveler that came to the tavern last night and asked for lodging. The host I saw of him he was safe in bed," said the landlord.
The men withdrew to a corner of the apartment, leaving one to keep guard over me. A soon saw they were in earnest consultation, and were evidently debating some important question. The man keeping guard over me said nothing, but scowled fiercely. I had not said a single word during all the time I had been in the barn. I was aware that whatever I might say would in all probability, do more harm than good, and it has always been a maxim of mine, to hold my tongue when in doubt. At last the discussion seemed to be ended, for the blackest of the whole cove forward, and without any introduction, exclaimed—
"I say, stranger, look here, you must die!"
I did not move a muscle or utter a word.
"You have found out our secret, and dead men tell no tales!"
I was silent.
"We will give you ten minutes to say your prayers, and also allow you the privilege of being shot or hung."
Suddenly an idea struck me. I remembered something that might save my life. I burst into a violent fit of laughter. In fact, it was hysterical, but they did not know it. They looked at one another in amazement.
"Well, he takes it mighty cool, anyhow," said one.
"Suppose he don't think we are in earnest," said another.
"Oh, stranger, you had better say your prayers," said the man who had first spoken, "time flies."
My only reply was a fit of laughter more violent than the first.
"The man's mad!" they exclaimed.
"Or drunk," said some.
"Well, boys," cried I, speaking for the first time, "this is the best joke I have ever seen. What, hang a pal?"
"A pal—your a pal?"
"I ain't nothin' else," was my elegant rejoinder.
"What is your name?"
"Did you ever hear of Ned Willet?" I replied.
"You may be certain of that. Ain't he the head of our profession?"
"Well, she's dead," said some.
"You Ned Willet?" they all exclaimed.
"You may bet your life on that," I returned, swaggering up to the corner where I had seen the old woman counting and packing the counterfeit half dollars.
They all stared at me. None of the men present had ever seen Ned Willet, although his reputation was well known to them, and my swaggering, insolent manner had somewhat thrown them off their guard; yet I could plainly see that their doubts were not all removed.
"And you call these things well done, do you?" I asked, taking up a roll of the money. "Well, all I have to say is that if you can't do better than this, you had better shut up shop, that's all!"
"You show us any better?" asked one of the men.
"I rather think I can. If I couldn't I'd hang myself."
"Let's see it," they all cried.

Something About Our Navy.

It has been ascertained that during the war the navy has lost only 1,306 killed, and 1,239 wounded, out of 75,000 sailors and marines on the rolls. More than half of all the losses in the grand battle on the Mississippi, at Charleston, Mobile, Fort Fisher, and elsewhere—in a word, the splendid victories of Farragut and Porter—were due to the loss of the men in the single battle by a single division of troops. This is due in part to the fact that the enormous range of our navy kept it men out of musket range.

While the expense of the navy since the beginning of the war, including the construction and equipment of all its vessels and their maintenance, has been less than $230,000,000, or only about 7½ per cent. of the national debt. Moreover, we have at the close of the war ships enough to show for the money spent to constitute what is probably a better navy than that of either of the European powers. We have constructed, since 1861, 201 vessels of war, all of which are of the most improved models and contain all of the appliances of modern offensive and defensive warfare.

Gen. Sherman on Copperheads.

The following letter from Gen. Sherman to the men who opposed the war while there was any fighting to be done, and now claim all the honors of victory, was read by Gen. Kilpatrick at the Brooklyn mass meeting:

GEX JUDSON KILPATRICK—Dear Sir: I have observed with interest your political action in New York. It is really provoking, hardly worthy of a serious thought, and rather of satire and ridicule, the squandering of the politicians called Copperheads, who opposed the war from every conceivable motive. Some from sheer cowardice, others to oppose a political party. Some to show for the money spent in thought, the South, and now that it is reduced to emousation, have hard work to explain their conduct even to themselves. I have a patience with that class of men, and believe the people of the South have more reason to be angry with them than with the men for the Copperheads who, nominally their friends, led them deeper and deeper into trouble.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major-General.

A Mountain of Salt.

Among the many curiosities and wonders that have lately been discovered in the far off western wilds, none is more striking or marvellous than the mountain of Rock Salt, situated about twenty miles from Meadow Valley, Nevada, and only eighteen miles from the head of navigation in the Colorado river. It rises abruptly from the plain, about four hundred feet in height, a mountain of pure, sparkling crystallized Salt. Not a particle of dirt upon its seemingly a mountain of glass, being perfectly transparent, and when the reflection of the sun falls upon it, the glare is blinding. We have seen specimens taken from it, and in possession of Mr. C. B. Norton, and it is neither pure crystal, more than it is dead salt. From what we can learn of its extent and magnitude, there is salt enough in this one mountain to supply this continent for a century.—St. Joseph, Mo. Herald.

"Why don't you put on a clean shirt?" said a well, the other night, to his companion, "then the girls will smile on you as they do on me."

"Everybody can't afford to wear a clean shirt every day, as you can?"

"Why not?" said White Collar.

"Because," said Black Collar, "everybody's mother ain't a washer woman."

the platform stinked loud enough, but and noisy. And our folks bought him his title, but he got into his price.
Non-Geracy—AHEMUS!!
Joh's cattle was slain by murrain and horr and rich, and not livin' near No
York, the flesh thereof he could not sell.
But Joh had anthin left—still he could sell the hide and hoofs, but he had dorgs to look them.
Non-Geracy was the hide & taller av
the moosie, and that is gone.
What little is left of the Dimocory is all me, but where is the dorg, so low as to lick the hide and hoofs?
Non-Geracy av our ewa taken—lo! the strong hand av Abithianum hev taken it.
Non-Geracy wuz the Ayrat av wich our ark rated—below! the dark waven av
Abithianum ewe over our ark.
Darkness! fol's v-or me, like a pall—the shadder of vew uncomquatch me.
Down my furrowed cheeks rolleth the tears av anguish, varyin in size from a large pea to a small tar.
Non-Geracy will vote for the Constant Aye and No, and lo! the Nigger will oppose the bill.
I see horrid victims!
On the Camd in aud Aubrey, nigger brakes
men—and at the pole nigger!—
Where shall we find refuge?
To the North! Lo! it is barred agin us av Abithianum.
In the South? In their eyes the Northern perchard findeth us favor.
In Mexico? There is war there, and we might be drafted.
Who will I love us? Who will pluck is from the pit into which we lay fall?
Where I could go the Lord only knows,
but my impression is, South Kariny will be my future home. Wade Hamon is elected Governor, certain, and in that noble State
we may perhaps preserve enough av the

SALT MINES.
The salt mines of Cranoe were discovered in 1251. The length of the mines from east to west is above six thousand feet; the breadth from north to south above two thousand, and they are 800 feet deep. When a miner wishes to visit these mines he is obligated to a suit of miners' clothes and to be drawn by machinery a perpendicular descent of six hundred feet. The place is very dark, and the miner, who descends as a guide, strikes a light and conducts the stranger forward through several gloomy tunnels, until he is enabled to see the entrance. At the end of such the descend by ladders two hundred feet lower to a large cavern through this cavern they enter upon an open plain, peopled by the miners and their families, together with their horses. The most curious domestic animal seen here is the marmoset.
Nothing can exceed the brilliancy of this plain illuminated by thousands of candles reflecting their light upon the beautiful and transparent surface of the salt in every variety of color.

Is bringing up children, if we expect science to vindicate, passion by passion,

A NEW SKIRT FOR 1865-6.
The Great Invention of the Age in HOP SPRINKERS.

J. W. BRADLEY'S New Patent DU-PLEX ELIPTIC (or Double)
SPRING SKIRT.

THIS INVENTION consists of DUPLEX (or two) elastic Pique Harness Dress Springs inguini-tally attached to each other, together, edge to edge, making the voguester most VARIEUX, ELASTIC and suitable Spring ever made. They admit of ease or snare, like the Single Springs, and consequently preserve their perfect and beautiful shape more than twice as long as any Single Spring Skirt that ever has or can be made.

Considerable flexibility and great comfort and pleasure to any Lady wearing the Duplex Elliptic Skirt will be experienced particularly in all crowded
Assemblies, Balls, Theatre, Railroad Cars, Church Pews, Arm Chairs, for Promenade and House Dress, as the Skirt stays flat for a single day will serve afterwards as easily and conveniently as a Silk or Muslin Dress.

Those having enjoyed the Pleasure, Comfort and great Convenience of wearing the Duplex Elliptic Double Skirt, find it so simple they will serve afterwards willingly dispense with their use. For Children, Misses and Young Ladies they are superior to all others.

The HOOPS are covered with 5-ply double-twisted steel and polished to give a new style in the Single yarn-carving which is used on all Single Steel Hoop Elips. The three bottom rods on every skirt are also Double Twist, and twice or double covered to prevent the covering from wearing off the rods when dragging about alone, and thus save the trouble of changing them frequently, which is now the case, which they are consequently subject to when in use.

All are made of the new and elegant Corded Yarns, which give the best quality to every pair giving to the waist the most graceful and perfect shape possible, and being made of the finest materials, of the latest construction and economical price were made.

WHEBBS' BRADLEY & CO.'S PROPRIETORS OF THE Duplex Elastic Skirts, have their principal place of business in New York City, No. 10 Nassau Street, near Mills and Broadway, and at BRADLEY BROTHERS, New York,
No. 10 Nassau Street, first floor, between Broadway and United States and Canada, Havana de Cuba, Mexico, San Francisco and the West Indies.
